

The ten minute rule for text relay CA's is not appropriate for a Video Relay setting. Working with between typed and spoken English is much more straight forward than the process an Interpreter goes through to assess and match the language of the signing caller. If the caller or the interpreter are not comfortable with processing the call, either or both should not be constrained by the ten minute rule forcing them to wait ten minutes without functionally equivalent communication.